Why has the roundabout been put back in on the A308 Maidenhead Road where it meets Parsonage Lane.

The decision to install the roundabout was made by local Councillors, following a public consultation on options for the junction. Please see the following link for a recent press release on this matter.

http://www.rbwm.gov.uk/web/news_27912_A308_roundabout_works_date.htm

Please advise the total bill to convert it from a roundabout to a cross road, back to a roundabout again?

The cost for removal of the roundabout, inclusive of all works, including those carried out at the subway in Clewer Court Road, and legal costs associated with the turning restrictions imposed when the roundabout was removed, was £24,549.

There were additional resurfacing works carried out at the A308 /Mill Lane junction and in the immediate vicinity, which totalled £28,072. Although these works were carried out at the same time as the roundabout removal, these general highway improvements are not considered to be directly associated with the removal of the roundabout.

The new roundabout has recently been completed and RBWM is awaiting receipt of final accounts from contractors. The work order is remeasurable and may be subject to slight variation from the value of the works stated on the work order. It is anticipated that the final cost of implementing the new roundabout scheme will be £31,720. This is inclusive of additional works to improve the quality of the footways in the vicinity of the zebra crossing and rationalisation of existing traffic signs to improve the appearance of the area and reduce street clutter.

The work has been primarily funded by the Olympic Delivery Authority, with a £47,000 contribution to the removal and reinstatement of the roundabout. The additional costs have been met from funding in the Borough’s Highway Capital Works Programme.
